METATECH Blockchain 3.0

BLOCKCHAIN 1.0 | 7 Transactions Per Second

Blockchain 1.0 came into existence with the launch of Bitcoin in 2009, Despite Blockchain 1.0's novel proof-of-work (PoW) approach, problems with processing transactions surfaced.

BLOCKCHAIN 2.0 | 15 Transactions Per Second

To overcome the limitations of Blockchain 1.0, Blockchain 2.0 was established, with Ethereum taking the lead in launching the proof-of-stake (POS) protocol. Transaction processing was automated, but the congestion finally caught up to the network

BLOCKCHAIN 3.0 | 10,000,00 Transactions Per Second

Blockchain 3.0 builds on and refines its predecessor's technological capabilities. It utilizes a directed acyclic graph (DAG) as its data structure to facilitate a unidirectional flow of information that cannot be returned to the sender, thereby eliminating block times. This allows transactions to be processed almost immediately
